French 102 is available for Dual Credit through Ball State University.

Resources
- Emphasis will be placed on a variety of authentic resources from literature, film, music, journals and the Internet.

Course Description
This course introduces the fundamental elements of the French language. Emphasis is on the development of basic listening, speaking, reading, and writing skills in the context of cultural exploration of the Francophone world. Through the use of authentic resources, students will learn functional vocabulary, be introduced to different cultures, and discover how the French language and culture connects with their own. Students learn to participate in brief conversations, to read and understand words, phrases and short passages in context, and to respond in writing to various stimuli, all while demonstrating cultural awareness.

This course will be conducted primarily in French, and students are expected to use French as much as possible (see Barème de Participation). It is natural that you will not understand everything you read and hear, but if you are patient, committed and enthusiastic, you will be surprised at your progress over the semester.

Course Objectives
1. Demonstration of oral and written proficiency using basic vocabulary and a limited range of grammatical structures, including the present, past and future tenses of common verbs.
2. Comprehension of simple oral questions and ability to respond in French in an understandable manner.
3. Ability to give and follow instructions in French on how to get from place to place.
4. Ability to glean central ideas from authentic French texts of the kind found in magazines and newspapers.

“To study another language and culture gives one the powerful key to successful communication: knowing how, when, and why, to say what to whom.” Standards for Foreign Language Learning in the 21st Century, 3rd Edition Revised (NSFLEP, 2006).

Your final grade is composed of:
Attendance Policy  You are expected to attend all classes. You will be considered tardy if you arrive after the beginning of class. If you are ten minutes late or more, you will be considered absent, but are invited to attend the class session anyway so you will not fall behind. Sleeping in class and improper computer use may result in unexcused absences.

Course Expectations
Please come prepared for class each day by bringing:

1. Any homework that is due
2. A folder or binder for French
3. Loose-leaf paper
4. French materials
5. Writing utensils (pencil, pens – blue or black ink for assignments, plus red or green for corrections)

Behavioral Expectations
You are expected to:
1. Attend class daily
2. Be in your seat and prepared to work at the beginning of class
3. Prepare for class by completing ALL assignments (both graded and ungraded)
4. Respect yourself, others and the environment
5. Listen, pay attention and follow directions
6. Speak French and be an active participant

Participation  You cannot learn a language without taking risks and speaking it in class. Your participation in class is very important, and will have an effect on all aspects of your grade. You will receive a weekly participation grade on top of any formative and/or summative assessments. See Barème de Participation.

Use of Technology We will consult a variety of authentic resources online that are useful to language learning, so you should bring a device (phone, laptop, tablet) to class daily. However, all electronic devices are to remain off unless otherwise instructed. The unauthorized use of a device is strictly forbidden and will result in a warning the first time the student is caught and confiscation of the device the second time. In addition, your attendance will be recorded as “unauthorized use of device” and consequences will occur. The authorized online dictionary is www.wordreference.com and its downloadable app. The use of Google Translate or other translating sites, devices or software is strictly forbidden. (See Academic Integrity below).

Electronic communication  I will post the course syllabus, schedule changes, practice exercises, additional activities and announcements on Blackboard. You are responsible for checking Blackboard and PowerSchool on a regular basis so you do not miss anything.

Make-up Work  It is your responsibility to find out what announcements and assignments have been missed after an absence. Whether excused or unexcused, you may not use an absence as a reason for not being prepared or failing to turn in work. It is your responsibility to check Blackboard or with me to learn what we went over and what to prepare for next time. If your absence will be excused, you must provide me with appropriate, timely documentation in advance of your absence. If an emergency causes your absence, notify me immediately and supply appropriate, timely documentation in order to schedule a make-up or receive credit for late work. This is only allowed in extreme cases. Make up tests and quizzes, as well as oral and listening comprehension grades will be given during office hours. All work missed due to an unexcused absence will be a zero. NO EXCEPTIONS!!!

Late Work  Late assignments will be accepted for half credit if you hand them in the NEXT DAY. Remember that this is still an “F,” but it is better than a zero. All late work must be labeled LATE. Work handed in more than one day late will NOT be accepted for a grade (but you are encouraged to submit it in a timely manner for feedback purposes).

Diversity Statement Ball State University aspires to be a university that attracts and retains a diverse faculty, staff, and student body. We are committed to ensuring that all members of the community are welcome, through valuing the various experiences and worldviews represented at Ball State and among those we serve. We promote a culture of respect and civil discourse as expressed in our Beneficence Pledge and through university resources found at http://cms.bsu.edu/campuslife/multiculturalcenter.

Disabilities or Special Needs  If any disability requires course adaptations or accommodations, if emergency medical information needs to be shared with me, or if any special arrangements must be made in order to evacuate the building, please advise me at your earliest convenience.

Academic Integrity  Honesty, trust, and personal responsibility are fundamental attributes of the Indiana Academy community. Because language should be communicative, students are encouraged to collaborate in their studying. You may make judicious use of advice from native speakers and tutors. However, this does not mean copying someone else’s work or letting someone copy your work. It means working with a partner to gain a better understanding of the material, drill conjugations and vocabulary, read the literature together, etc. All work that you turn in—in class or otherwise—must be your own and completed without any kind of outside assistance. If you have questions about what constitutes “your own” work, please see me. The use of electronic translators of any kind is strictly forbidden in and outside the classroom. Plagiarism will not be tolerated. Academic dishonesty will result in a grade of zero for the assignment and other penalties outlined in the Student Handbook.
Course Plan

The instructor has the right to change this schedule as the semester progresses. Any changes will be announced in class and on Blackboard.

Courses in French Language and the Indiana Academy for Science, Mathematics, and Humanities

French 102 is a University Core Curriculum Course that seeks to implement the goals of the Ball State University Core Curriculum Program. A description of the role of language courses in the University Core curriculum Program follows:

The American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Language (A.C.T.F.L.) has developed a series of National Standards for Foreign Language Learning as part of the Goals 2000 initiative. Their philosophy is that language and communication are at the heart of the human experience. The United States must prepare students to communicate linguistically and culturally if they are to participate successfully and to maintain proficiency in English and at least one other language, modern or classical. The Council believes that, regardless of the reason for study, foreign languages have something to offer everyone. It is with this philosophy in mind that the standards task force identified five goal areas that encompass all of these reasons: Communication, Cultures, Connections, Comparisons, and Communities the Five C's of world language education.

1. Communication is at the heart of second-language study, whether the communication takes place face-to-face, in writing, or across centuries through the reading of literature.
2. Through the study of other languages, students gain a knowledge and understanding of cultures that use that language and, in fact, cannot truly master the language until they have also mastered the cultural contexts in which the language occurs.
3. Learning languages provides connections to additional bodies of knowledge that may be unavailable to the monolingual English speaker.
4. Through comparisons and contrasts with the language being studied, students develop insight into the nature of language and the concept of culture, and they realize that there are multiple ways of viewing the world.
5. Together, these elements enable the student of languages to participate in the multilingual communities at home and around the world in a variety of contexts and in culturally appropriate ways. An ability to engage in lifelong education by learning to acquire knowledge and to use it for intelligent ends.

In addition to contributing to the realization of the A.C.T.F.L. National Standards for Foreign Language Learning, courses in French at The Indiana Academy for Science, Mathematics, and Humanities and Ball State University reflect the goals and objectives of the University Core Curriculum program by helping students to develop knowledge, skills, and values that all graduates of the University are expected to share. By taking a class in French, students will progress toward the University Core Curriculum Goals listed in the University Catalogue. Students of French should therefore acquire:

1. An ability to communicate at a level acceptable for college graduates.
   We live today in a global village and are closer than ever before to the myriad cultures of the world. The ability to communicate directly with those other peoples is more than ever the mark of an educated person. There is also considerable evidence that the study of languages improves the understanding of one native language.
2. An ability to clarify one's personal values and to be sensitive to those held by others.
   Few experiences have a more profound impact upon one's understanding of the relativity of one's own cultural values and the predominance of the world of other values than a close encounter with another language. At a more personal level, the experience of studying, assimilating, and eventually emulating foreign linguistic and cultural codes provides an exceptional perspective on how modes of thinking and communicating are central to our fundamental selves.
3. An ability to recognize and seek solutions for the common problems of living by drawing on knowledge of historical and contemporary values and the elements of the cultural heritage related to those events.
   The study of modern languages has always included elements of history, culture, and geography, all of which play a significant role in highlighting the problems of living encountered by all peoples, including our own. The window that a language course opens onto the intimate workings of another society provides an especially privileged view of those very problems of living that we must confront every day.
4. An ability to work with others to solve life's common problems.
   In addition to providing insight into the lives of other peoples, language study offers students an unsurpassed opportunity to work cooperatively with their peers. Students often work in small groups with their classmates to use the foreign language as a vehicle for discussion as well as to share discoveries about the language and culture. The very process of language learning is collaborative.
5. An ability to assess one's unique interests, talents, and goals and to choose specialized learning experiences that will foster their fulfillment.
   Students of modern languages are encouraged to view their acquisition of language in the context of their specialized interests. In addition to providing students with specific skills, the acquisition of which engages a unique set of aptitudes, language classes address a wide range of interests that fall outside the immediate context of language learning. These range from the traditional academic discipline, such as history and philosophy, to applied arts, such as telecommunications, music, and architecture, and they include professional careers in the liberal professions, government, and industry.
